PROFILE

Dr. Heather A. Hausenblas, PhD, is a physical activity and healthy aging expert, researcher, and author. Her research focuses on the psychological effects of health behaviors across the lifespan. In particular, Dr. Hausenblas examines how physical activity and diet (including supplementation) relate to healthy aging. More specifically, her research focuses on the effects of physical activity and diet on body composition, body image, mood, adherence, eating behaviors, quality of life, and excessive exercise. She has applied theoretical models to examine the psychological effects of physical activity during pregnancy and postpartum and its relationship to the health of the entire family. She has also examined the clinical effects of resveratrol, green coffee bean, fenugreek, and saffron supplementation and multiple health behavior interventions on healthy aging.

Dr. Hausenblas has been recognized for her research, and she has been the recipient of several awards. In 1996, she was awarded the Canadian Association for Psychomotor Learning and Sport Psychology Young Scientist Award for Scholarly Research. In 2003, Heather was the recipient of the Dorothy V. Harris Memorial Award for outstanding early career development in health and exercise psychology from the Association of Applied Sport Psychology. In 2005, she was the recipient of the early career distinguished scholars award by the North American Society for the Psychology of Sport and Physical Activity. In 1998, she received the Sport Science Award of the International Olympic Committee.

Dr. Hausenblas is the co-author of five scientific books, and she has published about 100 scientific journal articles. She has conducted over 200 national and international scientific presentations. She has also been the receipt of several research grants to examine the

Dr. Hausenblas obtained her Doctorate from The University of Western Ontario in Canada. She was a faculty member and the Director of the Exercise Psychology lab at the University of Florida from 1998 to 2012. She is currently the Associate Dean for the School of Applied Health Sciences and a Professor of Kinesiology in the Brooks Rehabilitation College of Healthcare Sciences at Jacksonville University. She is the Vice Chair for the Mayor's Council on Fitness and Well-being. Dr. Hausenblas serves as a Scientific Advisor for nutrition and health companies. She is a mom to three young boys, and she enjoys exercising outdoors, spending time with her family and friends, and coaching and watching her sons play sports. She resides in Jacksonville, FL with her husband and boys.
